Grand Scheme

Do you ever think about how existence is so big, yet so small? How, in one moment, we could be nothing at all just because someone, something wishes it?

I think about it all the time now, but then, I was among the ants, scrambling and picking their ways through life until they one day disappear forever. In those days, a moment felt like a lifetime and years felt like forever.

I was excited then, a bright future and hope shining from my heart with more power than ever before.

But just as existence is all expansive and uniquely divided all the same, constantly growing and separating from each other, my mind and heart had no idea just how much change I would experience.
